

Repeat Coursework

Federal regulations limit the number of times a student may repeat a course and receive federal financial aid for that course.

- A student may receive federal financial aid when repeating a course that was previously failed (F) or withdrawn from (W).
- Once a student passes a course (with a D or better, including a Pass grade) the student may receive federal financial aid for only one additional attempt of the same course, regardless of the grade earned for the second attempt.
- For the second attempt, a grade of W does not count as an attempt. However, a passing grade or a grade of F does count as an attempt and the student is no longer eligible for federal aid for that course, even if it is a requirement from the college or school to earn a grade higher than a D.
- If a student retakes a course that is no longer eligible for financial aid, the credits are excluded from the total enrollment and the student's financial aid will be adjusted to exclude these credits.
- Please note that the repeat coursework rule could also affect academic progress. Repeated courses will be counted in both the attempted hours and hours earned when determining maximum timeframe. To see maximum timeframe limits for each program
